Let's begin, together.

Your Self-Awareness Compass 05

Summarize what you've discovered in one simple visual to guide your growth beyond this guide.

01 What is Self-Awareness?

Self-awareness is the ability to observe your own thoughts, emotions, patterns, and behaviors with curiosity—not judgment.

It's the moment you pause and ask, "Why did I react that way?" or "Is this really what I want?"

When you're self-aware, you're not just living—you're choosing.

There Are Two Types of Self-Awareness:

1. Internal Self-Awareness

Your ability to understand what you feel, believe, need, and value.

Questions like:

- What matters to me?
- What triggers me?
- What are my deepest desires?

2. External Self-Awareness

Your ability to understand how others perceive you and how your actions impact them.

Why It Matters:

When you become more self-aware, you can:

- Make decisions that align with your truth
- Set boundaries with confidence
- Let go of patterns that no longer serve you
- Understand your triggers and emotional needs
- Build a life that feels like you—not just one that looks good on the outside

Quick Self-Awareness Check-In

Reflect on the statements below and rate how true they feel for you right now:

(1 = Not true at all, 5 = Very true)

- I pause to check in with my thoughts and emotions
- I notice what triggers me and reflect on why
- I know what gives me energy and what drains me
- I understand my needs and boundaries
- I can name my core values and desires

Your score is not a judgment—it's a starting point.

The goal is not perfection. The goal is presence.

“Self-awareness is the foundation of clarity. When you know who you are, everything else becomes easier to navigate”

02

Know Yourself – Reflection Prompts

This section is where your journey deepens.

These questions are designed to help you uncover truths that might be buried under routine, expectation, or fear. There are no wrong answers here—only honest ones.

Take your time. Come back to these as often as you need.

This is your space to meet yourself again.

*Before You Begin:
Find a quiet space. Get comfortable. Don't rush. Let your truth rise in its own time.*

Self-Reflection Prompts

1. Who was I before the world told me who to be?
Think back to your childhood or teen years. What brought you joy? What parts of you have gone quiet?
2. What parts of myself have I silenced, hidden, or neglected? Are there talents, dreams, or feelings you've downplayed to keep the peace or avoid judgment?
3. When do I feel most like myself? Is it when you're alone? Creating? Helping? With certain people or in certain environments?
4. What consistently drains me, even if it looks "good" on the outside? This might be people, work, habits, or roles you've outgrown.
5. What do I secretly wish I had the courage to change or say out loud? Listen closely to what this answer tells you. It often reveals your deepest desire.

A Spiral Visual or Timeline Exercise

Optional Activity: My Evolution Timeline

Draw a timeline or spiral and plot 3–5 turning points in your self-identity.

Label what each season taught you about yourself.

- Start: _____
- Shift: _____
- Now: _____
- This visual map reminds you that identity is fluid, not fixed.

Choose an Affirmation

Select one to carry with you as you reflect:

- “I am safe to know myself.”
- “Every version of me has value.”
- “My truth deserves space.”
- “I’m allowed to evolve.”
- “I am not behind—I am becoming.”

Write it here and repeat it aloud:

Affirmation: _____

You do not have to have it all figured out to return to yourself. You only have to be willing to listen.

03

Your Personal Values Map

“Your values are not just words. They are a mirror, a guide, and an anchor.” – Roman Viola Brenda

Why Knowing Your Values Changes Everything

If you've ever said:

- "I don't know what I want anymore."
- "I'm not sure why I feel off."
- "I keep making decisions that look good but feel wrong."

...it might be because you're making decisions without a clear connection to your values.

Your values are the invisible threads that hold your life together.

When they're honored, you feel grounded.

When they're ignored, you feel lost, reactive, or overwhelmed.

Knowing your values helps you:

- Set boundaries without guilt
- Choose jobs, relationships, and goals that fit
- Create a life that reflects who you really are—not who you were told to be

Choose Your Core Values

From the list below, circle or highlight as many that speak to you—then gently narrow down to your top 5.

(No pressure to get it "perfect."

Choose what feels most important right now.)

Suggested Values List:

Authenticity, Growth, Rest, Simplicity, Purpose, Freedom, Peace, Courage, Spirituality, Creativity, Balance, Connection, Joy, Impact, Justice, Family, Fun, Adventure, Security, Self-expression, Love, Compassion, Wisdom, Integrity, Legacy, Belonging, Nature, Stillness, Ambition, Faith

Step 2: Reflect on Alignment

Use the prompts below to explore how your values are (or are not) showing up in your life:

1. Which of these values do I currently honor in my day-to-day life?
2. Which value do I most often forget or neglect? Why?
3. Which value feels like it's asking for more space in my life right now?
4. What would it look like to make even one decision this week based on this value?

Misaligned Values

Sometimes we think we value something because we were told we should—like productivity, achievement, or stability. But when we reflect deeply, we realize those values may not truly align with who we are today.

Ask yourself:

- Which values on my list feel like they belong to someone else's definition of success?
- Which ones feel like mine—but I've been afraid to live by them?

Envision Values-Aligned Life

Close your eyes. Take a deep breath.

Now ask yourself:

If I lived a life fully rooted in these 5 values...

- How would I speak to myself?
- What would I say yes to?
- What would I finally say no to?
- What would my mornings, relationships, and choices feel like?

Use this space to describe what your values-aligned life looks and feels like:

Your Values Are Your Compass

You don't need to figure out your whole future.

You just need to let your values guide your next small, true step.

"Your values are not just words. They are a mirror, a guide, and an anchor."-- Roman Viola Brenda

“When you stop living by default and start living by your values, peace is no longer a destination—it becomes your rhythm.”

Visioning Your Next Chapter

Why Visioning Is a Form of Self-Leadership

You've done the inner work. You've uncovered what you believe, what you need, and what you value.

Now it's time to ask:

"If I honored all of that... what kind of life would I build?"

This is not about creating a rigid plan.

It's about intentionally imagining what your next chapter could feel like—so you can begin shaping it on purpose.

When your inner clarity meets outer intention, transformation begins.

Part A: A Day in Your Aligned Life

Close your eyes. Take three deep breaths.

Now imagine a typical day—not a dream vacation or fantasy escape, but a regular, grounded, nourishing day—where you are fully you.

You feel aligned, peaceful, present.

Your energy is protected.

Your values are reflected in your schedule, space, and speech.

Now write about that day in detail.

Prompt:

“If I could live one full day in total alignment with who I am, it would look and feel like...”

- Where are you waking up?
- What are you doing in the first hour of your morning?
- Who do you interact with, and how do they make you feel?
- What kind of work or creativity fills your time?
- What habits support your peace and purpose?
- How do you wind down at the end of this day?

Use your journal to describe your vision:

Part B: Energetic Anchors

Let's take it a step deeper.

Answer these simple prompts to define the feel of your next chapter.

- The word I want to embody more is: _____
- The emotion I want to feel daily is: _____
- The energy I want to bring into rooms is: _____
- The pace I want to live by is: _____ (e.g., slow, intentional, spacious)

Part C: Future-Self Anchoring

Imagine yourself one year from now. She is grounded. She is clear. She is living more in alignment. She isn't perfect—but she's present.

Write a note from her to you:

“Dear Present Me, here's what I want you to know...”

Part D: Bridging the Gap

Change doesn't happen in leaps. It happens in aligned micro-moves.

Here's how to begin now—not later.

Fill in the blanks:

- If I lived just 5% more in alignment this week, I would...
- One decision I can make this month to support my future self is...
- One thing I need to release to create space for my next chapter is...
- One thing I'm committed to inviting in is...

Affirmation to Close:

"I am no longer waiting to become the version of me I envision—I am aligning with her now, one honest step at a time."

Visioning Your Next Chapter

Clarity isn't a destination—it's a direction you return to, again and again.

Why You Need a Compass

Throughout this guide, you've asked bold questions. You've reflected with honesty. You've uncovered layers of truth that may have been buried beneath roles, expectations, or fear.

Now, it's time to gather those pieces—to root them.

Think of this compass as a personal alignment tool.

On the days you feel off-track, unclear, or anxious, this is where you come back to center.

This is not about being perfect—it's about being honest.

You can complete this page once and revisit it regularly, or return to it monthly as your inner clarity evolves.

What I Know to Be True About Myself

What truths did this journey uncover for you?

These can be qualities, beliefs, passions, or patterns.

Example:

“I’m most alive when I’m creating.”

“I’ve been playing small to make others comfortable.”

“I crave spaciousness and quiet more than I realized.”

Write your truths down in your Journal

What I Value Most Right Now

Pull 3–5 values from your Part 3 exercise. These are your anchors.

Example: Authenticity, Peace, Connection, Simplicity, Impact

What I’m Letting Go Of

Letting go is sacred. What beliefs, habits, or roles no longer serve your growth?

Example:

“Letting go of the need to have all the answers.”

“Letting go of shrinking in conversations.”

“Letting go of guilt around saying no.”

What I’m Growing Into

This is your becoming. Who are you intentionally evolving into?

Example:

“A woman who speaks her truth, even when it’s uncomfortable.”

“A leader who leads with softness, not shame.”

“A life that feels slow, intentional, and brave.”

our Compass Summary Statement

Bring everything together in one sentence you can post, print, or speak aloud:

"I am a woman who values _____. I am releasing _____, and growing into _____. I choose to honor this every day, in small ways that feel true."

Closing Affirmation:

"I trust the woman I'm becoming. I don't need to rush to meet her—she is already within me."

"Your best self isn't someone you need to become—it's who you've always been, underneath the noise. Self-awareness simply brings her home." — Roman Viola Brenda

Closing Message:

You Did Something Brave

Dear Reader,

If you made it to this page—pause, and take a breath.
You just did something many people avoid their whole lives:
You turned inward. You reflected. You listened.
You gave yourself space to be honest, curious, and seen—by you.
That's not small. That's sacred.
Whether this journey stirred clarity or more questions, just know:

You are not behind. You are becoming.

And the self you're becoming? She's not waiting for you to be perfect.

She's waiting for you to be present.

So take what you've uncovered here, hold it close, and let it guide your next gentle, aligned step.

You don't have to know everything to start living differently.

You just have to keep showing up—with softness, and with truth.

With love and belief in your becoming,
